Background

The barley used to make this malt beer is grown in the Oglio river region in Lombardy and is cultivated with passion and enthusiasm. No filtration takes place in order to preserve the purity of aromas and flavours. The slow secondary fermentation in bottle enables this unique beer to evolve over time.

It should be stored in a cool, dry place, away from light and heat, and served in large thin glass goblets at 8-10 ° C. The important white foam will form, soft as a cream, it is a guarantee of authenticity and helps maintain the right balance.
